

Postdoc/Research Fellowship, Bar-Ilan University, Israel

AOS: Early Modern Philosophy

The position is associated with professor Ohad Nachtomy's research project, "Organism is mechanism ... but more exquisite and divine": Metaphysical and life-scientific approaches to organic beings in Leibniz's philosophy," which is funded by the Israel Science Foundation. The ideal candidate is a motivated scholar with strong antecedent interests in early modern philosophy and/or in the particular topic of the research project.

General requirements: A Ph.D. is preferable but not necessary. Strong motivation for research and the competence to do both independent and collaborative research is crucial.

Language requirements: the candidate must be able to write, edit, and prepare articles for publication in English. Reading knowledge of Latin, French, and German is highly desirable.

Teaching: one course (2 hours/week) as primary instructor and/or teaching assistance is an option.

Salary: Net pay of 7,000 NS ($1800) per month.

Period: The position period is 12 months and may begin in October 2017 (details will be determined upon appointment). An extension of the position is possible.

Application process: Please send a description (of 3 to 5 pages) of an intended research project, a CV, a writing sample, and three letters of reference to the Philosophy department's coordinator, Efrat Pulver, at Efrat.Pulver@mail.biu.ac.il by March 30th, 2017.

Note: Non-Israeli citizens should obtain an appropriate visa (the cost of which is about $100).

For more information about the research project, please contact Ohad Nachtomy directly at ohadnachtomy@mac.com

<https://biu.academia.edu/OhadNachtomy>